Drug bust massive: Police

► Cops execute 16 searches in Ottawa, one in Toronto, seizing $2.5M in cash, gold and silver bars, other assets ► 14 guns, 13 cars, $200,000 worth of various street drugs also found

JESSICA SMITH
@METRONEWS.CA

Ottawa police chief Vern White thanked citizens of Vanier yesterday for alerting police to drug dealing — which led officers to making a $2.7 million bust.

"This is probably the most important drug investigations in Ottawa in 20 years," said White of Project Sleepwalker, which involved the officers with the OPS, RCMP and OPP.

Police arrested 22 people, who were all part of an organized crime group that was previously unknown to police.

"Although the individuals had criminal records, the group as a whole was really not on our radar screen. This investigation began with a community making complaints about drug dealing and prostitution on Montreal Road," said Laviolette. "As a result, our street crime unit was able to go out and do what they do."

The 22 suspects are an organized crime group, but they don't have a name, Laviolette said. "There's no initiation, they

Police allege the group's leader, a 32-year-old man brought drugs from Toronto to distribute in Ottawa by "mid-level dealers" and say that structure qualifies the operation as organized crime.

► GPS data about OC Transpo bus locations still isn't available to the public.

Tierney drives bus GPS plan

► Councillor urges city to let experts handle bus GPS ► Move comes after news only 28 per cent of bus fleet outfitted with new GPS devices

City council's resident tech guru is fed up with confusion and delays surrounding the release of live GPS bus location data and is looking to take action on the file.

Beacon Hill-Cyrville Coun. Tim Tierney wants the city to overhaul how it approaches technology initiatives for OC Transpo.

He brought a motion that won support from the transit commission to have quarterly OC Transpo IT reports given to the IT subcommittee, so that group can also influence the transit authority's technology projects.

"The IT subcommittee is more involved in this kind of subject matter," Tierney said. "At transit commission, people's eyes glaze over if you talk about technology."

The move comes after news that only 28 per cent of the bus fleet has been outfitted with new GPS devices, when that project was supposed to be almost complete. Instead of being done by the end of the year, OC Transpo is looking at the first three months of 2012, Transpo general manager Alain Mercier wrote in a memo to city councillors Nov. 24.

OC Transpo still isn't ready to release live GPS data about bus locations, so that people who have smartphones could use applications to locate their buses.

"It is very disheartening. I am not happy about it," Tierney said, adding outraged phone calls and emails he received about the issue are justified.

Tierney also has concerns about if and when bus GPS information will be made public as "open data" so developers can use that information to power their own mobile applications.

OC Transpo is still working on advertising that will ensure the city can earn some revenue off of its own official bus times "app," but if there is no money to be made, Tierney wants assurances that the data will be released to the public anyway.

"If we're going to roll something out, it can't be half-baked," Tierney said.

City hospital cited for food-safety violations

► Inspectors' findings include food-storage errors, no soap at the hand-washing station and failure to ensure food was protected from potential contamination

@METRONEWS.CA

Public Health found seven "critical" food-safety deficiencies at the Ottawa General Hospital this year, three of them in the last week.

On both Monday and Wednesday this week, inspectors found the hospital failed to "separate raw foods from ready-to-eat foods during storage and handling."

The hospital also earned a critical deficiency for not having paper towels in a dispenser at a hand basin in the food-preparation area on Monday this week and on Aug. 19 of this year. On April 15, the citation was for having no soap in the dispenser at the wash-handing station.

Frances Furmankiewicz, director of nutrition for the hospital, said the latest problems were due to "employee error." Though all the employees are trained and certified to handle food, they were given more training as a result of the inspections.

"We have actually rectified all of those incidents now," she said.

Brenda MacLean, a program manager with Public Health, said all critical deficiencies have the potential to make food unsafe.

"That's the whole point of inspections — making sure that all the measures are in place to make sure that nobody does get sick," she said.

Public Health will re-inspect the hospital today, she added.

A number of people at the hospital Thursday said they were concerned when they learned about the poor inspection results and said they would no longer eat there, including Cindy Gilman, who was at the hospital to pick up her daughter.

"I thought the hospital would have been great at following regulations — it's a hospital," she said.

Mock. Funeral

► Protesters carry a young woman down Cartier Street Thursday after she pretended to be shot and killed by Syrian forces during a peaceful demonstration.

JOE LOFARO/METRO

Occupiers show Syrian solidarity

Members of the Occupy Ottawa movement joined protesters outside the Syrian embassy on Cartier Street Thursday in solidarity with those who are demonstrating in Syria. Police officers escorted the group of about 20 people through downtown.

$5.5M The new hours cost $5.5 million and come after the city cut about $20 million from the system in September as part of the route optimization plan.

Better bus routes coming

OC Transpo will announce Monday which routes will receive the extra 66,000 hours of bus service the city is paying for as part of the 2012 budget.

General manager Alain

Mercier said the hours will go to add more buses to some routes and some trips will be extended so more buses run the full route. They will take effect in the new year. ● JESSICA SMITH

Habitat a 'hand up' not a 'hand out'

► City to vote on Orleans Habitat for Humanity project by early spring ► If approved, build starts in summer

@METRONEWS.CA

A small group of people who oppose a Habitat for Humanity project in their neighbourhood for "socio-economic reasons" are off base, the ward councillor said yesterday.

Habitat for Humanity is planning a multi-unit project on Nantes Street in Orleans and some property owners in the area have spoken out against the project, saying it will bring down property values.

"There were people in the beginning who had questions — and I would include myself in that — about what Habitat does, but after sitting down with them and getting to know them, I think it's pretty clear they do very good work in the community," said Cumberland Coun. Stephen Blais, who met with constituents recently.

Habitat for Humanity screens their residents carefully and chooses people who work, but don't make enough to afford a mortgage on their own, said Blais. "These are hardworking people who need a hand up, not a handout and they integrate well into the community," he said.

Other residents had planning concerns that were addressed at a meeting on Wednesday, where the charity presented a

"It's important to note that Habitat sells homes to people who can't qualify for a regular mortgage. In Ottawa, you can make $62,000 a year and still qualify for a Habitat house. I think we would agree that $62,000 is a not bad salary."

► RCMP Commissioner Bob Paulson salutes during a change-of-command ceremony, welcoming him as the 23rd commissioner, in Ottawa on Thursday.

Bringing more women into the RCMP will help strengthen the national police force as it works to stamp out harassment, says the new top Mountie.

After being formally installed as the storied force's 23rd commissioner in a pomp-filled ceremony Thursday, Bob Paulson said he also wants to see more women in the senior ranks.

"My view is, we bring more women into our decision-making process at the executive level, we have a much more representative decision-making body in the force."

He takes over the RCMP amid complaints of bullying and sexual harassment from several members.

Paulson, 52, said the force has made progress on the issue, starting with an "extraordinary" meeting of the top brass and changes to the way harassment cases are tracked.

Several female RCMP officers have come forward since Cpl. Catherine Galli-

Policeman killed at Virginia Tech

► Gunman found dead in parking lot ► Campus was quieter as classes ended Wednesday

A gunman killed a police officer in a Virginia Tech parking lot and was found dead nearby Thursday in an attack that sent fear through the campus nearly five years after it was the scene of the deadliest shooting rampage in modern U.S. history.

The school locked down for hours and warned students and faculty members via email and text message to stay indoors.

"Today, tragedy again struck Virginia Tech," said university president Charles Steger. "Our hearts are broken again."

The police officer was killed after pulling a driver over in a traffic stop. The gunman, who was not involved in the traffic stop, walked into the parking lot and shot the officer,

"It's crazy that someone would go and do something like that with all the stuff that happened in 2007."

COREY SMITH, 19-YEAR-OLD SOPHOMORE

Sgt. Robert Carpentieri said. A law enforcement official who spoke on the condition of anonymity confirmed the gunman was dead.

It appeared the gunman died in another school parking lot, where officials said a man was found dead with a gun nearby. While police wouldn't confirm the second body was the gunman, Carpentieri said "you can kind of read between the lines."

Shafia says he was a loving, lenient father

A man accused of killing his three daughters over family honour portrayed himself Thursday as a loving, benevolent and lenient father, even though his children were cruel to him.

The picture Mohammad Shafia painted of himself as he took the stand at his murder trial was in stark contrast to evidence the jury has heard from Crown witnesses over the past six weeks. Court has heard that his children were afraid of him, begging authorities to remove them from the home, and that he cursed them as treacherous on wiretaps secretly recorded after their deaths.

What Shafia meant, when he was recorded on the wiretaps saying that even if the girls came back to life 100 times he would "do the same again," is that he would continue to give them good advice, he told court.

Shafia and his wife, Too-

ba Yahya, 41, and their son Hamed, 20, have each pleaded not guilty to four counts of first-degree murder.

They're accused of killing Zainab, 19, Sahar, 17 and Geeti Shafia, 13, and Rona Amir Mohammad, 52, Shafia's first wife in a polygamous marriage. The four bodies were found June 30, 2009, inside a car submerged in a canal in Kingston, Ont.

Devil talk

► Shafia also tried to explain what he meant when he said on the wiretaps, "May the devil (defecate) on their graves."

► "To me it means that the devil would go out and check with them in graves," Shafia said. "If they have done a good thing it would be good, if they did bad it would be up to God what to do."

► The remains of a Canadian flag can be seen flying over a building in Attawapiskat, Ont., on Nov. 29.

Attawapiskat on the hook for consultant

► Troubled reserve must pay federally appointed manager $180K ► Harper defends fees as necessary

The federal government is forcing the troubled Attawapiskat First Nation to pay a private-sector consultant about $1,300 a day to run its finances — even though the government's own assessments say the third-party management system is not cost-effective.

Aboriginal Affairs officials told The Canadian Press they have an agreement to pay Jacques Marion of BDO Canada LLP a total of $180,000 to look after the reserve's accounts from now until June 30.

The money comes from the Attawapiskat First Nation's budget.

That rate over the course of a year would run up to $300,000 and easily pay for at least one nice, solid house, notes Mushkegowuk Grand Chief Stan Louttit.

"And (Aboriginal Affairs) should pay for this over and above First Nations existing budgets," he said.

Instead, the band will soon find itself cutting off educational assistants and aides for special-needs children in order to scrape together the money to pay the consultant, said New Democrat MP Charlie Angus, whose northern Ontario riding includes Attawapiskat.

But Prime Minister Stephen Harper brushed aside criticism of the fees and requests from the opposition to cover the costs. Harper told the House of Commons the government is just making sure the band council in Attawapiskat stops mismanaging taxpayers' money.

EXPLOITATION TARGETED

New child porn law puts onus on Internet providers

A new law aimed at curbing child pornography on the Internet is now in force.

The law requires Internet service providers to report tips they get about websites containing child porn.

They also have to tell police if they believe a child porn offence has been committed using their service.

Failure to comply carries fines ranging from $1,000 to $100,000 or jail time for repeat offenders.

Justice Minister Rob Nicholson says the exploitation of children by online sexual predators is a serious crime.

The government says the law balances privacy concerns with the need to tackle the issue.

No link between abortion, anxiety

► Study finds unwanted pregnancies, not abortion, trigger mental-health issues in women

Abortion does not increase a woman's chance of developing mental-health problems, according to the largest study ever to investigate the issue.

Among women with unwanted pregnancies, those who had abortions were no more likely to suffer from problems including anxiety or depression than women who gave birth, the research review by the U.K.'s National Collaborating Centre for Mental Health found.

The research shows the "reassuring news" that abortion does not cause mental-health problems, but raises a warning that officials must address the problem of unwanted pregnancy, said Dr. Tim Kendall, the centre's director.

The study is likely to be met by skepticism by those opposed to the practice and believe that terminating a pregnancy can trigger depression or other mental illnesses.

Kendall said mental health problems seemed to be linked specifically to unwanted pregnancies rather than abortion.

About 11 to 12 per cent of women in general suffer from mental-health issues like anxiety or depression, but among women with unwanted pregnancies that figure rises to about one-third, he said. For women who later had an abortion, there did not appear to be any increase in their rate of mental-health problems.

President Barack Obama on Thursday defended his health secretary's decision to stop the Plan B morning-after pill from moving onto drugstore shelves next to condoms.

► Russian President Dmitry Medvedev has had an obscene characterization of a prominent opposition figure appear on his Twitter account.

Tasteless tweet raises Russia's ire

► Offending retweet of a post by United Russia ideologue has been removed from Medvedev's account

President Dmitry Medvedev's affection for going online has turned off-colour after an obscene characterization of a prominent opposition figure appeared on his Twitter account.

Medvedev's tweets are usually bland, such as congratulating victorious sports teams. So the post describing popular opposition figure Alexei Navalny as a sheep engaging in an unprintable sexual act sparked huge attention.

A Kremlin statement says the message, a retweet of a posting by United Russia party ideologue and former parliament member Konstantin Rykov, was posted by an unnamed member of the president's technical staff. It added: "The guilty will be punished."

The post, late Tuesday, came on the second straight day of large demonstrations by protesters over the vote fraud seen in Russia's parliamentary election Sunday.

The post does not mention Navalny by name, but clearly refers to him, denouncing the phrase the "party of crooks and thieves" that Navalny popularized on his blog to characterize United Russia, the country's dominant party.

Navalny was arrested Monday on the first night of protests in Moscow and sentenced to 15 days in jail.

NATO TALKS

Deadlock over missile defence

Russia and NATO remain deadlocked on a long-running dispute over the alliance's plan for a missile shield for Europe, officials said Thursday, and Russia warned that time was running out for an agreement.

NATO Secretary-General Anders Fogh Rasmussen reported no progress toward a deal on the contentious issue, following a key discussion among alliance foreign ministers and Russia's Foreign Minister Sergey Lavrov that came amid political turmoil in Russia and tart criticism of the United States.

Fogh Rasmussen rejected Russian criticism that NATO is ignoring its concerns that the planned missile system might one day be turned on Russia. He left the door open for more talks before the next planned NATO summit in May 2012.

Don't interfere in Syria: Russia

Russian Foreign Minister Sergey Lavrov said Thursday that Syrians should be allowed to sort out their country's problems without outside interference.

Lavrov said that Syria should follow the example of Yemen, where long-time President Ali Abdullah Saleh stepped down after a 10-month uprising in exchange for immunity from prosecution.

Hunted saves hunter's life

► Married couple shoots and skins moose calf after getting lost in a hunting trip ► Uses hide as a blanket

Steve and Sheila Joyce of Steady Brook, N.L., were hunting Tuesday afternoon when they wounded a moose calf and then became disoriented while tracking it through the woods between Corner Brook and Bonne Bay.

As dusk fell and the temperature dropped to a few degrees above freezing, they realized they were hopelessly lost.

That's when they suddenly came upon the wounded calf and killed it, a recovering Sheila Joyce said Thursday from their home. They used its skin to keep warm through the night.

Joyce, in her mid-40s, has hunted with her husband for the last several years.

They had followed a blood trail from where they had wounded the calf near their SUV.

Their food and water was in the vehicle and her husband had set down their survival pack as they tracked the animal for what they thought would be a brief chase, she explained.

"We could see the Jeep from there — so we didn't think there was any possibility of getting lost when we went into those woods," said Joyce.

The couple's son, who searched through the night, alerted nearby hunters, who fired a shot into the air to find them.

The couple sent back an answering blast and was soon rescued.

They were briefly checked into a hospital and are now home.

CHILD ABUSE

Scouts Canada apologizes

In a solemn six-minute video posted online Thursday, Scouts Canada offered a public apology to all former members who may have "suffered harm" at the hands of volunteer leaders in the past and announced a third-party review of its records relating to abuse.

"Our sincere efforts to prevent such crimes have not always succeeded. We are sorry for that," chief commissioner Steve Kent said in the YouTube video. "We are saddened at any resulting harm. Our most profound sympathies extend to all victims and to their families."

Kent's words came weeks after a report on CBC's Fifth Estate alleged Scouts Canada maintained a list of suspected pedophiles and did not share it with authorities.

Apology rings hollow

Japan's apology to Canadian veterans who suffered brutal treatment in prisoner of war camps during the Second World War is too late to be of significant meaning, veterans said Thursday. During the 70th anniversary of the Battle of Hong Kong, Japan's parliamentary vice-minister for foreign affairs apologized for the mistreatment of survivors who spent years toiling in labour camps.

Clinton instigated protests: Putin

► Says U.S. spending hundreds of millions of dollars to influence Russian politics ► Clinton stands by criticism

Russian Prime Minister Vladimir Putin, facing the possibility of nationwide protests against his rule, on Thursday accused U.S. Secretary of State Hillary Clinton of instigating demonstrators in the wake of the disputed parliamentary election.

The comments came as opposition supporters largely stayed off the streets after three nights of sizeable protests. No protests were seen in Moscow and only a small one where 10 people were arrested was reported in St. Petersburg.

But the wave of discontent — which has already undercut Putin's public persona of being both strong

Blame game

► Putin's attempt to rally support by blaming the United States for his troubles would find little support among ordinary Russians, said political analyst Dmitry Oreshkin.

► "Even in Soviet times, it did not work," Oreshkin said. "Now it won't work for sure."

and beloved — may be far from cresting. More than 30,000 people have promised on a Facebook page to attend a Saturday protest in Moscow and similar rallies have been called for more than 70 other cities.

Putin, in televised remarks, accused the U.S. of encouraging and funding the Russians protesting the alleged election fraud in Sunday's elections. By recently describing Russia's election as rigged, Clinton "gave a signal" to his opponents, said Putin, who also warned of a wider Russian crackdown on dissent.

"They heard this signal and with the support of the U.S. State Department began their active work," Putin said.

Moscow has already put about 50,000 police and 2,000 paramilitary troops on the streets, backed by water cannons.

Internet used to mobilize people

Aside from a mass protest near the Kremlin on Saturday called for by opposition groups to demand a vote recount, a map circulating on the Internet shows similar protests planned for Saturday in more than 75 cities around Russia, while a page on LiveJournal lists more planned protests in 15 countries around the world.

The use of the Internet to mobilize protesters in Russia is a new phenomenon.

Anton Nossik, a popular blogger and Internet expert, said it was not the Internet that energized the protesters but the brazen vote rigging that prompted many young Russians to express their discontent offline.

"They came out not because they read information (online) on where to show up for the first time,

"I used to express my opinion in my blog, in social networks, I wasn't really politically active. But enough is enough. I am fed up with all of this."

but because for the first time many people got the feeling that the time had come for that," Nossik said.

Sam Greene, director of the Center for the Study of New Media and Society in Moscow, said this week's protests in Moscow were a combination of online and offline social networks working together.

"They're going out to protests with people they know, with people they trust," he said.

Selling old gold and silver jewelry? The bad. The ugly. The good.

Skyrocketing gold and silver prices has many consumers wondering how much their old or broken gold jewelry is worth.

The question you should be asking yourself is: where do you go to ensure you receive a fair offer? There are plenty of options but which ones pass the common sense test?

Option #1: New companies. Inflated promises. False advertising.

Anyone can post really high payout prices. There are no laws to protect unsuspecting consumers from misleading ads that promise to pay outrageous and unrealistic prices.

They use them to lure people in, then adjust weights, inaccurately evaluate material (eg. say something is 10kt when it's actually 14kt). The bottom line, people end up with less money in their pocket, not more.

Option #2: Mail away your gold. Hope for the best.

Most consumers feel uneasy about mailing their jewellery to one of the many flashy "Cash for Gold" type companies seen on TV. The truth is, several of these companies have received harsh criticism from consumer advocacy groups because of their notoriously shady sales tactics and low payouts.

So, if those ads featuring cash waving "customers" send a chill down your spine, it's for good reason.

Option #3: Recycle Frog, you be the judge.

Recycle Frog is an Ottawa-based precious metals recycling company that has built its business by serving today's more prudent middle and upper-middle-class consumer. Comprised primarily of ex-Royal Canadian Mint employees, Recycle Frog's payout rates are published, and consistently rank among the highest in the industry.

One-on-one evaluations are conducted at their many convenient public events or are pre-scheduled at their World Exchange Plaza location. They're a trusted fundraising partner to various charitable organizations including the United Way, CHEO, Christmas Exchange and The Canadian Cancer Society.

Get a competitive, haggle-free offer for your old gold and silver by simply calling Recycle Frog at 613-695-1236 or visit their website at www.recyclefrog.com for more information.

OILSANDS DEVELOPMENT

Joslyn mine gets approval

The federal government has given the green light for the Joslyn oilsands mine project to go ahead, six years after Total E&P Canada first proposed it.

Natural Resources Minister Joe Oliver said Thursday that construction can now begin on the mine near Fort McMurray, Alta., though there remains a two-week consultation period with local First Nations groups.

The prolonged review process for Joslyn shows the need for Canada to streamline its regulatory system, Oliver said in a statement.

Suncor Energy, Canada's largest energy company, picked up a minority interest in Joslyn late last year through a $1.75-billion deal with the French-owned E&P.

Environmental groups were quick to blast the approval, particularly since it comes during the United Nations climate-change conference in South Africa.

The oilsands have been criticized because of the greenhouse gases that are emitted when fossil fuels are burned.

China court rejects Apple lawsuit

A court in southern China has rejected a claim by Apple Inc. that a Taiwanese-owned company has infringed its iPad trademark, a ruling that could threaten U.S. company's sales of its tablet computer in the country.

The court said on its website that it dismissed a lawsuit on Monday by Apple against Shenzhen Provview Technology over the ownership of the iPad trademark.

The court has ruled that the Shenzhen company is not bound by a 2009 agreement that its Taiwanese affiliate made with Apple to transfer the trademarks.

Yahoo says it has won a $627 million court judgment in a scam that tried to dupe people into believing they had won prizes in a bogus lottery sponsored by the Internet company.

Economy at risk from Euro crisis, BoC says

► Potential for 'adverse shock' increased: Bank of Canada

Canadians need to start worrying about the worsening debt mess in Europe and its ability to hit hard in this country, the Bank of Canada warned Thursday in its semi-annual financial stability review.

"The (bank's) governing council judges that the risks to the stability of Canada's financial system are high and have increased markedly over the past six months," the central bank stated.

"Since June, the global retrenchment of risk associated with the European crisis has indeed resulted in a significant correction in the prices of equities and other risky assets, as well as a widening of credit spreads in Canada."

Frankly, the bank said, measures currently undertaken to bring the European debt crisis under control "have repeatedly fallen short of what is needed."

On Wednesday night, Finance Minister Jim Flaherty poured cold water on an unconfirmed report that G20 nations would funnel $600 billion US to Europe through the International Monetary Fund.

1 Calgary Philharmonic Orchestra: Classical music went all hip when Tourism Calgary and CPO, as part of its vocal warmup to a new season, asked followers on Twitter to tweet their advice for staying toasty this winter. CPO assembled the best 20 tweets, set them to an offbeat compilation version of O Fortuna, and posted their performance, Singing Tweets, to YouTube. It is believed to be the first professional Twitter chorus ever created. A tweeterus.

2 Heroes exhibit: Inspired by his nephew, who overcame brain cancer, artist/gallery owner Mark Gleberzon has launched an exhibit, Heroes: Real, Fictional and Close to Home, which runs through Dec. 31 at his MJG gallery in Toronto. It features works by 16 artists who have interpreted the theme "heroes," from comic book superheroes to soldiers who have given their lives to cyclists as heroes juxtaposed against city traffic. Inspiring.

3 Canada's first Free Shipping Day: Mark next Monday, Dec. 12 on your calendar as that's the day Free Shipping Day comes to Canada. Taking a page from the popular U.S. Free Shipping Day, it allows you to snap up last-minute deals from online merchants (see freeshippingday.ca for participating merchants) and receive free shipping with delivery by Christmas Eve. Yes, sick days and surfing online should be way up come next Monday.

4 New Year's Eve movie: Garry Marshall's new romantic comedy New Year's Eve opens this Friday, about love and lust on New Year's in Time Square. It stars Sarah Jessica Parker, Hilary Swank, Jessica Biel, Ashton Kutcher, Zac Efron, Halle Berry, Robert De Niro and more. As Ellen said on her show this week, "Literally everyone in the world is in this movie." In other words, this New Year's Eve better not be a bust.

5 Own the Green Bay Packers: They're coming off a Super Bowl win last year, and are unbeaten this year. So now is a great time for the publicly owned Green Bay Packers to set up a site PackersOwner.com, that allows Cheeseheads to buy "common stocks" (they're $250 per share) in their storied franchise. You'll be sent a 12-inch-by-8-inch certificate so that "you will be able to display your ownership with pride," according to the site. Xmas gift. In.

6 Top trending topics: What the Trend, Hootsuite's trend-spotting company, evaluated more than 200,000 Twitter hashtags to determine the top trending topics of 2011. The likes of Justin Bieber, Lady Gaga and Britney Spears are a few of the celebrities that made the Top 10. Thankfully, Kim Kardashian wasn't on this list. She should be on a Not Ever Trending Again list with Paris Hilton.

7 G N' R: With news that seminal rock band Guns N' Roses are among those being inducted into the Rock and Roll of Hall of Fame in 2012, comes new rumours of a possible reunion. I prefer to leave their Appetite For Destruction album in 1987 in high school, and not see a bloated Axl Rose ever take the stage again with Slash to perform Sweet Child O' Mine. FOR METRO

Going out to see a movie is always nice, but bringing that theatre experience home is something you can enjoy year-round. If you were really good this year, maybe Santa will spruce up that aging home theatre for you.

Here are our picks to help you bring the cinematic experience home for the holidays.

55-inch LG Cinema 3-D LED TV — $1,599

As the technology matures, the price of 3-D TVs continues to drop. You don't have to break the bank this holiday season in order to put a 3-D TV under the tree. LG sets itself apart from the rest by offering passive 3-D technology in its Cinema series televisions. The glasses are cheap, lightweight and much easier on the eyes than traditional 3-D glasses. The TV comes loaded with useful apps such as Netflix so you will be guaranteed to have something to watch after you are done opening all the presents!

70-inch Sharp Aquos Quattron — $3,299

If you think bigger is better then look no further than the 70-inch Sharp Aquos

Quattron. This LED TV is ideal for those who want a large picture but don't have the appropriate setup for a projector. Sharp's Quattron technology adds a fourth (yellow) pixel into the mix for more vivid yellows and more vibrant blues. A matte screen also ensures glare from light sources is reduced. You can also purchase this television in an incredibly large 80-inch model.

24-inch PlayStation 3-D LED Display — $499

The first PlayStation branded monitor! This display will change the way you game. Say goodbye to split screen! SimulView technology filters out your opponent's screen so two players can play the same game at the same time yet only see their own full screen action. Cheating is now a thing of the past. This HD monitor comes with two pairs of 3-D glasses, HDMI cable and Motorstorm Apocalypse for the PS3.

Samsung BD-D7000 3-D Blu-ray Player — $349

A small but mighty Blu-ray player! In fact, it's not much larger than a Blu-ray disc! This player features 2D-to-3D Up Conversion, so even your old Blu-ray movies can be viewed in 3-D.

Connect your device to your wireless network and open up even more features such as apps, wireless streaming or the playback of various types of video, music, and image files via

You can wirelessly stream your content (standard definition and high definition) directly to your Apple TV through Apple's AirPlay technology. Of course, you can also use Apple TV to access Netflix, YouTube, Vimeo and live Major League Baseball games.

Sony Personal 3-D Viewer — $799

Imagine always having the perfect seat in the movie theatre! Now you can with your very own 3-D Viewer from Sony. Two 0.7-inch OLED screens sit in front of your eyes, but your brain tricks you into thinking you are staring at a 150-inch movie screen 12 feet away. The viewer offers full 5.1 surround sound.

Motion pictures: The gift that keeps on giving.

To a true Hollywood devotee, though, regular old DVDs rarely cut it. They are nowhere near comparable to the Mega-Platinum

Everything-But-The-Kitchen-Sink box sets that seem to come out around the same time snow starts piling up at our doorsteps.

This year is no exception, of course, so with that, keep these bona fide flicks in mind when looking for something to turn your film freak starry-eyed this holiday season.

Current

Harry Potter: The Complete Eight-Film Collection

Warner

A full decade and eight feature films into this legacy, few need introduction to the bespectacled wizard and his spellbinding saga. However, even with latest series-capper Deathly Hallows only coming out recently, Warner announces that as of Dec. 29, all Harry Potter films will disappear from store shelves. While you have presumably been building your collection since 2001 debut The Philosopher's Stone, grab The Complete Eight-Film Collection fast, before even magic can't bring it back.

Classic

Willy Wonka & The Chocolate Factory 40th Anniversary Ultimate Collector's Edition

Warner

With a title that long, it has to be great. Yes, we are all familiar with the inimitable Roald Dahl tale as performed by Gene Wilder, yet when packed with multiple extras in a double-wide numbered gift set, who can resist? We will all feel like Veruca Salt pining for the hours of extras, including a fresh director interview, Dahl featurette, 144-page production book reprint and — most importantly — a retro Wonka Bar-shaped tin box with scented pencils and eraser.

Cartoon

Mr. Magoo — The Television Collection, 1960-1977

Shout! Factory

Whether fondly reminiscing or introducing a new generation to this goofy glasses-needing cornball,

Mr. Magoo is a wealth of innocent animated fun. Gathering all three series together for this 11-disc box set, The Television Collection is a true opus of fun, boasting 30-plus hours of sticky situations.

Television

The Big Bang Theory, Seasons One To Four

Warner

Catching on faster than a malicious meme, this sitcom has turned two unlikely nerds into modern day heroes ... when we can understand their intellectual jargon. This mega-box set is fleshed out with actor-on-actor interviews, a focus on song creators The Bare-naked Ladies and a gag reel, creating 48-plus hours of Einstein-worthy hilarity.

Horror

Friday The 13th: The Ultimate Collection

Paramount

No, it's not exactly in keeping with the holiday spirit, but even horror hounds deserve something this season. Heeding the call, The Ultimate Collection delivers with splatter film star Jason Voorhees and all 10 of his Friday The 13th flicks served up in a gruesome package. Bolstered by expanded editions, a book and a life-sized replica of the slasher's trademark hockey mask, this collection is as cool as it is creepy.

THE SMARTPHONE MARKET

ANDROIDS ARE TAKING OVER THE WORLD

There's a lot of talk that Google's innovative mobile platform Android is becoming the number one smartphone platform in the world. And for good reason.

Earlier this year, Google announced that 400,000 new Android devices are being activated every day. That adds up to about 200 million Android devices in use around the world today!

In Canada, comScore, a measurement firm, also recently reported that Android doubled its share of the smartphone market between June to September. And, research company Gartner Inc. says Android represents 52.5 per cent of the worldwide smartphone market.

So what makes Android so successful?

First, the operating system is not tied to a specific manufacturer, so there's a wide selection of devices for consumers to choose from. Mobility, for example, carries Android smartphones made by HTC, Nokia and Samsung.

There are also a wide range of price points, from super affordable smartphones, such as the Samsung Galaxy Mini ($169.99 at Mobility), to more premium-priced phones like the Samsung Nexus S ($349.99 at Mobility) and HTC Amaze 4G ($549.99 at Mobility).

Here's what else makes Android's appeal so wide-reaching:

KEYBOARDS

Choose from both touchscreen and touch/QWERTY models. Some Android smartphones even come with handy keypad apps, like Quicktype by Swype, which comes pre-installed on the Samsung Galaxy Mini. It lets you quickly "swipe" from letter to letter to form a word rather than having to tap on each touchscreen key — making sending texts and emails a breeze.

CUSTOMIZATION TOOLS

Android makes it easy to set up the device to your liking. The intuitive TouchWiz on the Samsung Galaxy Mini, for example, lets you customize your home screen with widgets.

GOOGLE SERVICES

Android smartphones have smooth and easy compatibility with all Google services, including the free Google Navigation with turn-by-turn instructions, YouTube, Google Search and many others. With Mobility's unlimited data, you can access these features as often as you need to.

APPS GALORE

There's a never-ending supply of apps — 320,000 free and paid apps at the Android Market; or you can download apps from other sources to customize your Android the way you want it!

VOICE ACTIVATION

The free Voice Search app lets you search your phone, the web and nearby locations, by speaking into the device instead of typing. For example, you can tell your Samsung Nexus S smartphone what to send by text message — and it will. Now that's smart.

MEDIA

Android makes it easy to load and play music and movies, with support for most common video file formats. Cameras range from the 5-Megapixel camera with autofocus and LED flash on the Samsung Nexus S to the 8-Megapixel HD camera and bonus 2-Megapixel front-facing camera on the HTC Amaze.

FOUR TO EXPLORE

Samsung Galaxy Mini is a great quality Android at an affordable price. Its 3.14-inch Touch Screen with Touchwiz technology makes the interface highly responsive to touch. The 600 MHz processor supports Flash video.
At Mobility, $169.99

"After 24 hours, I love the HTC Panache," states a customer review on howardforums.com. "It's a well-built machine. If you need a phone that has an excellent screen, and is fast, check out the Panache." The powerful Panache offers the best of style, function and innovation. It has interactive camera effects, a built-in flashlight (via the LED camera flash) and it can turn into a portable Wi-Fi hotspot.

At Mobility, $299.99 (reduced from $499)

Samsung Nexus S made techradar.com's 10 Best Android List — and no wonder. The first Android Gingerbread 2.3 phone features a 1 GHz processor, 16GB of internal memory and a 4-inch curved glass multi-touch display.
At Mobility, $349.99 (reduced from $499)

HTC Amaze 4G — just released — rings in the holidays with a large, 4.3-inch vibrant LCD touch screen, two cameras and 1.5 GHz dual core processor for fast web browsing, downloading and true HD video viewing.
At Mobility, $549.99 regular price.

YELP

Yelp is a fun way to find and talk about great (and not so great) local businesses like restaurants, bars and shops; also spas, live shows and galleries. The whole idea is to preview places you're considering and see what other people think of them before you go to potentially save you time and money on a place that might not be up to par. Free

KEEP IN TOUCH

Stay connected with PingChat! This app lets you send unlimited texts, photos, videos and voice notes instantly. Receive messages instantly too with push notifications and see message receipts. Plus, share your social profile with confirmed contacts! PingChat also allows for group chats with multiple friends. Free

WHY ANDROID?

If you're thinking about getting a new smartphone and having a hard time choosing which platform to go with, here are some things to consider:

LOTS OF CHOICE Android phones are made by different manufacturers, which means there's a wider range of devices available than with other platforms.

FITS ANY BUDGET Android devices start at an affordable no-contract price of $169.99 at Mobilicity.

LARGER SCREENS Screens on Android smartphones are not limited to the 3.5 inch size found on some platforms — in fact, Android displays range up to 4.5 inches in size.

DOUBLE THE MEMORY Androids don't just have internal memory; there are options for external memory, too.

NOTIFICATION Android phones have a convenient notifications bar, not multiple pop-up notifications.

FLASH! Android smartphones support Adobe Flash — which makes for a better web experience!

Tips to simplify your holiday shopping

Are you overwhelmed at the prospect of tackling your holiday gift list? Here are a few tips to help put your fears to rest and conquer that list like a pro:

1 Get gifts that are personal. Start by making a list. Write down who you are shopping for and then list their interests. This will help you narrow down gift ideas and ensure success.

2 Avoid spending time on wasteful items, such as a card for every present. Print personalized labels at stickeryou.com and put them on everything from presents to wine bottles to your holiday baking. This will save you both time and money.

3 Find gifts that can be enjoyed by the whole family. If you have four family members on your list, cut it down by settling on one gift they can all enjoy together. This can include a board game, a DVD set, even a craft. For example, StickerYou.com has a product called Make + Print Your Own Stickers. It offers packages of 40 to 110 stickers that make for a fun craft project. Mom can make family address labels, dad can come up with funny bumper stickers, and the kids can design name stickers for all their gear.

4 Order online. Avoid lineups at the mall, let the gifts come to you. Or better yet — have it shipped directly to them. NEWS CANADA

❄ Getting drunk, acting silly or any other non-professional behaviour should be avoided at your office holiday party. Being known as the office clown is never a good thing, particularly at promotion time next year.

Don't be the talk of your office party

CHARLES

ASKCHARLES
METRONEWS.CA
FOR MORE, VISIT
CHARLES
MACPHERSON.COM

Oh, yes, the annual office holiday party! This can either be a disaster waiting to happen or an opportunity for business success.

First and foremost, despite the name, a holiday party is still a business function and getting drunk, acting silly or any other non-professional behaviour is out. Remember, these are your working peers and bosses, and being known as the office clown from the annual holiday party is never a good thing, particularly at promotion time the following year!

So keep the number of alcoholic drinks under control. I like the rule of two alcoholic drinks at a cocktail party and three alcoholic drinks for a sit-down dinner. Try to pace these out by having a non-alcoholic drink between each alcoholic beverage.

Keep your conversation pleasant. You can talk about a large number of items and, in fact, the best lesson to learn if you are nervous about what to talk about is to read Metro from cover to cover the morning of your party. Why you ask?

Because this gives you a bunch of topics to talk about that are all current and relevant. What not to talk about always remains the same in a professional environment. Never talk about politics or religion.

It is important to make a point and mingle, greet and acknowledge all of the senior members of your company at the party.

Finally, last but not least, have a good time and enjoy yourself; this will be evident to everyone around you.

Handmade gifts with a creative twist

The holidays can pose a challenge for crafters: What to make for friends and relatives that is useful, attractive — and fast to churn out? Speed and simplicity are key this time of year.

These projects capture the imagination and offer ample opportunity for improvising; put your creative twist on any of them for memorable gifts.

Felt soap

The first time Leah Adams of Seattle gave out felt soap for the holidays, one of her relatives cut the felt away, taking it for an elaborate packaging. It wasn't. The colourful felting is slightly abrasive and holds suds well.

Five years later, Adams sells hundreds of felt soaps, including at her Etsy online shop, kneek, or SpiderFelt. But she always includes a tag that warns against cutting away the felt. Adams recommends viewing her Felt Soap Tutorial on YouTube for complete instructions, but it's basically wrapping a 55-gram bar of soap in wool roving, adding water, and then gently agitating the wool until it shrinks tightly around the soap. Presto.

e-reader cover

Lisa Occhipinti of Venice, Calif., is a painter and sculptor who tears apart old books, incorporating pages into her fine art, but also devising ingenious everyday sculptural uses, from mobiles and mirrors to wreaths and the "Kindle Keeper." She finds old books at thrift stores and garage sales. The Kindle Keeper can be fashioned for any electronic tablet, protecting the device while returning the feel of a good book to the e-reading experience.

She explains how to customize the project in her book The Repurposed Library (Stewart, Tabori & Chang, 2011): Start with an orphaned hardcover book whose title or cover art match the gift recipient's interests and is large enough to comfortably fit the device. Tear out the inside pages. Cut a piece of decorative paper to fit the spine's height and width, adding 1.3 centimetres to the width. Glue that in; allow it to dry.

Apply three small Velcro dots to the back of the electronic device — two at the top, one at the bottom. Attach the hook mates to each piece of Velcro, then remove the paper backing and centre the device on the inside back cover of the old book, pressing to secure the Velcro to the back cover.

Simple beaded jewelry

The 2011 Martha Stewart Holiday Handbook shares instructions for how to make delicate, beaded necklaces with minimal parts. Its simplicity is the beauty of this project, says Marci McGoldrick, editorial director of Holiday & Crafts for Martha Stewart Living.

"A lot of jewelry on the market now uses ribbon instead of chain, or there's fabric incorporated into it," says McGoldrick.

Using 50 centimetres of 5mm-wide ribbon and a beading needle, string assorted beads. Attach a clasp and a connector to the ribbon at each end, knotting them into place. Another necklace: For a continuous strand of beads, use 50 centimetres of silk beading cord. Attach a connector to the end of the cord and thread with beads. At the midpoint, thread two jingle bells, and then continue beading. Affix the clasp to the other end by knotting it.

Embellished T-shirts

There are many ways to embellish and personalize a T-shirt; hand or kitchen towels; or a tote. McGoldrick suggests taking a profile photo of a beloved pet, enlarging it and cutting it out of a fabric that won't fray, such as ultrasuede. Attach the silhouette and a twill-tape collar and leash to a tote with craft glue; sew them to a T-shirt or towel.

Synopsis

It's Dec. 31 and we follow the stories of Robert De Niro as a terminally ill man; Halle Berry as his kindly nurse. Then there's odd couple Michelle Pfeiffer and Zac Efron, anxiety-ridden Hillary Swank, ex-lovers Katherine Heigl and Jon Bon Jovi and even Ryan Seacrest pops up playing — who else? — himself. Have we left anyone out? Probably. There are more stars here than in the heavens, but rest assured, by the end of the movie, stories have woven together and no hearts are broken.

RICHARD CROUSE & MARK BRESLIN

SCENE@METRONWS.CA

Dropping the ball?

▶ Impressive collection of stars in New Year's Eve ▶ But film devoid of real emotion

Richard: Mark, this mish-mash of easy sentiment, romance, illness, musical numbers and product placement flip-flops from story to story so often, it's like a five-year-old grabbed the remote and is wildly channel surfing. It's not so much a movie as it is a cavalcade of familiar names in situations geared to make you understand why everybody hates Dec. 31. Am I being too cynical?

Mark Breslin: Oh, Richard, what's the matter with you? You mean you don't like shoddy writing, implausible plot lines, cameos masquerading as script development, and a general tone of emotional manipulation? The movie screams

"BOGUS" from the opening "inspiring" shots of the Statue of Liberty to the hack credit roll outtakes.

You know what's odd? I kind of liked Valentine's Day, the earlier, funnier, more touching version of this Garry Marshall shmaltzfest. Here's a challenge: did you find anything to like?

RC: Well... let me see. I thought Zac Efron was passably charming and a couple of the outtakes at the end are funnier than anything contained in the actual movie. But there are Walmart commercials with more real emotion than director Gary Marshall manages to bring to this manipulative mess.

MB: And I didn't mind the scenes between Ashton Kutcher and Lea Michele. Trapped in an elevator, at least the movie slows down long enough for a few real moments to break through. And Larry Miller was funny as the tow truck operator.

But back to the travesties: Russell Peters hiding behind an accent he swore he'd never do; Michelle Pfeiffer's stupid bucket list; Robert DeNiro's bathetic hospital scenes; but the worst was Hilary Swank's "love" speech to the assembled Times Square multitude.

I've lived in New York, and believe me, the crowd wouldn't have applauded politely — they would have hurled obscenities at her. Which would have been a much better scene!

RC: It certainly is a New York-centric flick. Even NYC mayor Bloomberg gets into the action.

By the time he kicks off the New Year's Eve countdown with the words, "Let's drop the ball," it's already abundantly clear that Garry Marshall already dropped the ball with this movie.

MB: Very funny, Richard!

I think a better version of the movie would have been scenes of Garry Marshall convincing all those Hollywood stars to work for a fraction of their rate card.

Emma Watson's advice to teenagers is: "feel comfortable in your own skin." The 21-year-old Harry Potter star, on her second visit to Hong Kong, told reporters Thursday: "Be true to who you are and do the best to feel comfortable in your own skin. You are all right exactly as you are."

Downey Jr. dusts off his deerstalker

► Established actor reprises his role as Sherlock Holmes in sequel

SCENE@METRONWS.CA

Robert Downey Jr. knows how to work a room. I notice this while at the swank-a-delic Peninsula Hotel in Beverly Hills for a press conference to celebrate the release of Sherlock Holmes: Game of Shadows.

It's a packed panel, including co-stars Noomi Rapace (the original Girl With the Dragon Tattoo) and Jared Harris, mega producer Joel Silver and Downey's business and life partner Susan. Between them there are untold Oscar nominations and hundreds of millions in box office returns, but that doesn't mean squat when Downey enters and takes centre stage. All eyes — and 90 per cent of the questions — go to him. Midway he feigns embarrassment at the attention and says, "Why doesn't someone ask Joel Silver a question?" Why? Because Downey is the most quotable, funny and memorable person in the room, that's why.

Here's a sample of what he had to say.

On making sequels:

"There should be a whole online support team for anyone who has ever been involved in making a second part to a first that worked. There is so much to learn. The greatest disguise was us disguising ourselves as consummate by-the-numbers professionals when, in fact, we're all incredibly eccentric."

When asked to talk about performing Sherlock Holmes's drag scenes:

"I guess we're not talking about this as one of the most important films of the year. I put on some make-up. How are we going to get nominated with these kinds of questions?"

On improving on set:

"I think the goal is to make a well-written scene seem improvised, or to find things in the room you couldn't have known until you get in the real situation and just try and improve things as you go along."

On why his co-star was absent:

"Jude (Law) would have been here, by the by, but his son had a soccer game."

On keeping the set "green":

"I just remember that every animal that was harmed was promptly taxidermied and sent as a gift to one of the many ecological companies who have these huge concerns that I validate."

On working with Jude Law and director Guy Ritchie:

"Jude and I are pretty close, but Guy and I are practically brothers. There have been times I have wanted to lob off his head with a machete."

The Sitter

Genre: Comedy

Director: David Gordon Green

Stars: Jonah Hill, Sam

Rockwell

🌐½

In The Sitter, Jonah Hill plays a likeable, albeit contemptuous drop-out reluctantly babysitting three even more disdainful kids.

But when his hideous girlfriend lures him to score her cocaine, the night turns into a crass journey of misadventures. Simply put, The Sitter plays solely as a vehicle for Hill to perform the chubby-guy-talking-trash shtick he's mastered since Superbad. If that works for you, sit tight and enjoy him in his pejorative prime. ● STEVE GOW

We Were Here

Genre: Documentary

Director: David Weissman

Stars: Ed Wolf, Paul Boneberg, Daniel Goldstein

We Were Here chronicles the rise of AIDS in San Francisco's Castro district, giving historical perspective to what was once thought of as a "gay cancer." Told through first-hand accounts from the people that lived through the epidemic's early years, their stories of losing not just friends, but entire social circles, is heart-wrenching. Coupled with attitudes outside the community that ranged from apathetic to downright hostile, this is really the story of how a community was brought together by a common tragedy. ● IAN GORMLEY

A little Fireball

► Willow Smith wants her fans to be empowered after listening to her new album ► Pairs with Nicky Minaj

Willow Smith is all about kid empowerment.

The young singer says she's hoping to inspire listeners with her upcoming album Knees and Elbows.

"It's gonna make them feel like they have control over their lives and can do what they want to do and be the person they want to be," she said Wednesday night.

Willow is already proving that at just 11. The daughter of Will and Jada Pinkett Smith has become a buzzed-about star thanks to her hit song Whip My Hair. She's also become a fashion trendsetter with her funky clothes; on Wednesday, her hair was closely cropped with big bangs in the front, and she wore a cropped jacket with decals, including the name of her album, and sequined jeans.

"I get a lot of my style from my friends," she said, also citing her aunt.

Willow recently teamed up with another fashionista, singer-rapper Nicki Minaj, for Willow's new song Fireball. Willow premiered it for groups of children and their parents at the Sony Store, as well as BET's 106 & Park.

Even though Minaj and Willow are cited for their style, Willow says they didn't share any fashion tips. "We just kind of vibed off each other and had fun," she said.

Knees and Elbows is scheduled to be released in April. Willow said it will be "more R&B." The title ties in to her theme of inspiration.

"Everybody falls down and scrapes their knees and elbows but they eventually get back up," she said.

Willow said she and her famous family will be vacationing for the holidays, and that she's not anxious about a Christmas gift.

"I have everything I need. I have my mom, my dad, my brothers, my family; ... that's pretty much what I want to keep," she said.

2011'S MUSICIANS WHO DESERVE ANOTHER LOOK

SOUND CHECK

ALAN CROSS
SCENE
@METRONEWS.CA

There's just too much music these days.

No wonder that so much great stuff—a disturbing amount—slips through the cracks. Here's a list of artists and albums that you may have missed over the last twelve months.

Cults/Cults

A boy-girl band from Manhattan who went from mysterious indie duo to major label signing in the space of just a few months. I dare you not to sing along.

Cut Copy/Zonoscope

Third album from this Australian electronic band which has been nominated for a Grammy. Opener "Need You Now" is a great love song.

EMA/Past Life Martyred Saints

EMA is Erika M. Anderson, who makes music out of what seems to be a succession of life crises. It's the kind of powerful, painful stuff that Courtney Love used to make about twenty years ago.

PJ Harvey/Let England Shake

No two PJ Harvey albums ever sound alike. Her tenth album is nothing short of stunning. No wonder it won Britain's Mercury Prize.

The Joy Formidable/The Big Roar

When this album came out in January, some people were calling this Welsh band "the next Muse." That might have been a bit much, but this is still one of my favourite indie records of the year.

Lykke Li/Wounded Rhymes

Think of her as Sweden's answer to Björk and Tori Amos but without the attendant weirdness. A hit in Scandinavia, it should have garnered more mainstream attention elsewhere.

The Kills/Blood Pressure

Yes, I have a thing for Alison Mosshart, whom you might remember from working with Jack White in The Dead Weather. If the band name sounds familiar, it might because the other half of the band, Jamie Hince, married Kate Moss this past summer.

My Morning Jacket/Circuital

Think a more psychedelic Kings of Lion. Maybe their Grammy nomination in the Best Alternative Album category will goose things for the band.

Unknown Mortal Orchestra/Unknown Mortal Orchestra

Yes, it's supposed to sound like this. UMO's music sounds like it's coming from an AM radio broadcasting a strange kind of pop-funk from 1973. Not for everyone, but that doesn't mean it isn't fascinating.

Washed Out/Within and Without

A synthpop chillwave album that's floaty, luxurious and cheerfully blissful. Although it reached as high as #26 on the Billboard album charts, I still think more people need to hear this record.

Hollywood's 100

► The most influential women in entertainment gathered at the Beverly Hills Hotel to celebrate

For the 20th consecutive year, Hollywood's most powerful women came together to break bread and celebrate their achievements in entertainment.

Jane Fonda and the late filmmaker Laura Ziskin were honoured at the breakfast ceremony

Wednesday at the Beverly Hills Hotel, held by the Hollywood Reporter in concert with its annual Power 100 ranking of the entertainment industry's most powerful women.

"This list matters," said Janice Min, the magazine's editorial director. "Acknowledging the achievements of women in a town where only 16 per cent of all powerful, behind-the-scenes jobs are held by them — and that number is declining — is important."

Anne Sweeney, co-chairman of Disney Media Networks, tops the list.

Chelsea Handler, who ranked 97th on the list, welcomed guests including Nancy Grace (ranked 86th) and reality star Bethenny Frankel (No. 100 on the list), along with actresses Kate Bosworth and Emmy Rossum and the ubiquitous Kim Kardashian.

Actress Kirsten Dunst and

Sony Pictures co-chairman Amy Pascal (No. 2 on the Power 100 list) presented a tribute to Spider-Man producer and Stand Up To Cancer founder Ziskin, who helped raise more than $180 million for cancer research before succumbing to the disease in June.

Former Paramount Pictures chief Sherry Lansing lauded her friend Fonda for her pioneering work in film, fitness, philanthropy and activism, presenting the 73-year-old actress with the Sherry Lansing Leadership Award.

Lansing said that Fonda has "led us artistically and made us question our lives politically."

"I still idolize you, Jane, and you still inspire me," the former studio chief said.

Fonda said that while women have made strides in front of and behind the camera, the entertainment industry needs more female decision makers.

"Until more women wield the

How Regis Got This Way

TV legend pens book about the famous people who have changed him

Regis Philbin still gets worked up about the 17-year-old Seinfeld episode in which he called Kramer "bonkos."

"Oh my God, I lose my breath every time I think about it," says the perennially exasperated TV host.

The anecdote is detailed in How I Got This Way, Philbin's new memoir about his encounters with a seemingly endless parade of celebrities including Jerry Seinfeld, George Clooney, Howard Stern, Steven Spielberg, George Steinbrenner and Joe DiMaggio.

Last month, Philbin left Live! With Regis and Kelly after more than 28 years on morning television, many of them spent with co-hosts Kathie Lee Gifford and Kelly Ripa. During the daily host chat segment on Live!, he mastered the art of turning an everyday incident into an engaging story.

play from the moment he shows up for a 9 a.m. interview.

"You wouldn't believe what I've been through!" says the excitable entertainer, launching into a colourful tale about a lost passport.

As for the job he has just left, Philbin says he's been so busy promoting his book that he's had little time to miss Live!

Written in a highly readable format, each chapter of How I Got This Way is about someone who made an impact on Philbin and concludes with a summary of what the Who Wants To

Be A Millionaire? personality took away from the encounter.

"I just kept writing about those incidents that moved me in some way," says Philbin. "I thought, this can happen from spending one night with someone, or a meeting with someone, or just brushing against them in some way — that they can, in another way, change you for the better."

Philbin writes about a wild night he and wife Joy spent at Clooney's Italian villa on Lake Como. He tells of his initial encounter with shock jock Stern (his neighbour in New York City) and

Who's Fascinating to Barbara Walters

Who's been naughty, who's been nice: Walters chats to 10 of the most prominent news-makers of 2011

On her new TV special, Barbara Walters gets up close and personal with Donald Trump.

Maybe too personal. "We started with his hair," confides Walters. "He said, 'Pull it and you can see that it's not a hairpiece.' So I did. And I still think it's a hairpiece."

Trump — the follically perplexing reality star, businessman and sometimes presidential candidate — is on Walters' list of The 10 Most Fascinating People of 2011, which airs on ABC on Wednesday at 9:30 p.m. EST. It's the 19th annual compilation of the year's most prominent names in entertainment, sports and popular culture.

Walters says she questioned Trump on his year of political adventures, which included commandeering the "birther" bandwagon by stoking doubt about U.S. President Barack Obama's U.S. citizenship, and by teasing voters with the prospect of his stepping into the presidential race as a Republican candidate (Trump, of course, then opted not to take the leap).

"But he still is talking about running," Walters says. "He told me, 'If the Republicans pick the wrong person, if the economy continues to be bad, I would certainly consider running as an independent.'"

Other Fascinating People include talent-show baron Simon Cowell, pop singing sensation Katy Perry and New York Yankees star Derek Jeter, who tells Walters that he'd like to own an athletic team.

"I told him, 'You're making a lot of money. You could buy one,'" reports Walters. "And he says, 'Great. I'll buy one with you.' We made a deal."

Also on board are Jesse Tyler Ferguson and Eric Stonestreet, the loving on-

Walters offers an explanation for all the popularity that's been showered on celebrities like the Kardashians who readily admit they have no talents worth celebrating.

Uh oh, Fear Factor's back

► Leech-filled lunches are just one of the delights we've been missing from this reality show

There's a problem on the set of Fear Factor.

The squirming leeches that are supposed to stick to a pair of production assistants who are testing a gross-out challenge keep falling off their nearly nude bodies before the wormy critters can be chewed up and swallowed. Inside a control-room truck parked outside a barn on the site of the L.A. County Fair, the show's producers scramble to save the slimy stunt.

Instead of couples taking turns dipping into a chilly tub filled with the blood suckers, the producers quickly decide that only the bikini-clad female halves of the teams will be submerged in the leech-infested water, and their male counterparts will be tasked with yank-ing the creatures off their teammates' skin with only their mouths before the pair gorge on leeches.

When the actual contestants tackle the slimy gag, it moves swiftly and without issue – well, any issue that would concern someone responsible for the likes of Fear Factor.

The bloodcurdling screams, violent vomiting and emotional breakdowns that ensue during the leech sucking-and-

Hate-to-love TV

Fear Factor debuted in 2001 and promptly became a popular guilty pleasure, long before such trashy fare as Jersey Shore and Keeping Up With the Kardashians.

► Ratings eventually dwindled though, and after a series of gimmicky installments, including Miss USA and military editions, Fear Factor slithered away from NBC after six seasons in 2006.

eating exercise delight the admittedly twisted producers inside the control room.

"When we do a stunt like today, I feel it's as good, if not better, than the gross stunts that we did in the past," executive producer Matt Kunitz said unapologetically during a break from filming earlier this year.

"We made the right call because the girls were all freaking out. If the guys were in the tub, they would've been stoic about it, and it would've been boring."

It's been five years since Kunitz and his team last worried about ways to freak out reality TV contestants, and time doesn't seem to have hindered their mission for tension-building sadism on the over-the-top NBC contest.

The revived Fear Factor, which begins Monday on NBC at 8 p.m. EST, will be broadcast in high definition but will feel familiar to viewers — same logo, format and host.

Winning over fickle TV fans

► Film and television execs try to lure viewers with aggressive marketing stunts and touring showcases

Gone are the days when a loyal TV viewer would turn the dial to a stalwart network like CBS and settle in for the evening.

Rare, too, is the film fan with a standing date to catch a big theatrical release on opening day.

And so it goes that comic Patton Oswalt recently found himself on a cross-country tour to pitch his new film Young Adult directly to movie-goers along with actress Charlize Theron and director Jason Reitman, theatre by theatre, town by town.

"I want people to discover this movie ... just with sort of a blank brain, rather than me putting any ideas into their heads right now," Oswalt says of the promotional strategy, which had the offbeat feature skipping the more usual festival circuit in favour of secret screenings with average viewers. "And just show them that, 'Hey, I'm excited about this, we're excited about this.'"

Film and TV marketers have been getting especially creative in their attempts to lure eyeballs in their direction, resorting to publicity stunts that seem to rely more and more on reaching out to viewers directly with on-the-street campaigns.

Stunts in 2011 included a flash mob in Toronto meant to promote the big-budget sci-fi spectacle Green Lantern. Marketing guru Mike Vollman says hitting the road with a movie and its cast is nothing new, but he acknowledges that out-of-the-box tactics are a sign of the times.

"It's certainly harder to find the audiences — everyone is super-distracted, everybody I know spends their entire day with their head buried into an electronic device," says Vollman, an L.A.-based consultant with 20 years experience working with Disney, DreamWorks, Paramount and MGM.

"That has also made it super-hard to get a hold of people but that doesn't mean a flash mob is going to make you see Green Lantern."

Lewchuk says bold, unusual stunts can at least get an audience to sit up and pay attention, and that's a good thing.

► Jet set fun: Pan Am is a globe-spanning melodrama set in the Kennedy presidency.

Watch us... please?

CTV pushed their fall lineup by setting up airplane-shaped screening rooms in shopping malls across Canada staffed with look-alike Pan Am flight attendants who invited mall rats to catch an early glimpse of rookie shows including Pan Am, X Factor and Grimm.

CTV marketing honcho Rick Lewchuk says the campaign was unusual but necessary to highlight a programming slate in an increasingly competitive entertainment field. "If you don't go the extra effort and you don't do those extra things then you're just kind of doing what everybody else is doing," says Lewchuk, senior vice president of Bell Media Agency, CTV's in-house marketing and promotions division. "They're time consuming, they're a little bit more work, but they're fun and I think the viewers appreciate it."

Great games — no batteries

► Nostalgia rules this year as parents want their kids to discover the board games they loved

In Christmas Past, children would find all sorts of simple games under the tree: Tiddlywinks, pickup sticks and board games could amuse young minds for hours.

Batteries and computer chips have made much of kid's play an electronic spectator sport today, but there are signs of some pushback.

Retailers are offering a variety of vintage-style games, and many baby boomers are seeking out the toys they remember fondly — puzzles, board games and the like.

Steven Josephson, owner of The Toy Box store in Mamaroneck, N.Y., said board games are always a big seller "but in the last couple of years, they've really been popular. People remember the old-fashioned games like Monopoly, Stratego, Sorry, and want their own kids to play them. Parcheesi's come way back this year."

At the New York International Gift Fair this fall, gift retailer Wild & Wolf drew crowds to its Ridley's collection of vintage-style games.

The line features many old favourites, including marbles, jacks and tumbling blocks. (Available at Burkedecor.com, among other sites.) The package designs are retro too: card-board or tin boxes, muted colours, early 20th-century-style lithography.

And indeed, the visuals are part of the appeal of these games. There's something charming about a toy that doesn't come in a loud, primary-coloured box, or a plastic case.

Hasbro has teamed up with Target this season to offer classic board games in wooden boxes, including Life, Clue, Risk and Scrabble.

"Key words for Christmas 2011 are nostalgia, family, tradition and longevity," says Riann Henckel, a forecaster for Sphere Trending, in Waterford, Mich.

If you're interested in the actual, original board games you played as a kid, you'll find sources online. Prices are often surprisingly modest, in the $20 range.

Los Angeles-based game collector Desi Scarpone has been an aficionado of board games since he was young, and rues the day he let his mom get rid of his old ones. Scarpone sells games from the 1940s through the 1990s at his website, 4gamesgoneby.com. They include some rare ones like 1951's Space Pilot, 1967's The Monkees, and a copy of the only Beatles game ever made, Flip Your Wig.

"There's been a steady resurgence in vintage board game popularity for the last several years. The children of my generation have children of their own, and they want them to feel the same joy and excitement they originally felt when playing these games," says Scarpone.

While today's game graphics tend to scream for attention, "People respond to the innocence of the artwork they remember in a vintage game," he notes.

At Vintagegame-world.com, there's a comprehensive array of mid-century games, and browsing can be a visit back in time.

There are old faves like Aggravation, Monopoly, Hi-Q and Careers, but also Easy Money, Acquire and Stock Market ("Anyone can make a million!").

Before there were Gears of War or Battlefield, you could play Tobruk, a war strategy game based in Second World War North Africa, or Arab-Israeli Wars, where you re-enact tank battles, or the classic Risk. The site's also got games that exploited TV culture of the '60s and '70s: Man From U.N.C.L.E., Happy Days, I Spy, Six Million Dollar Man.

If you're lucky enough to still own an old favourite but misplaced some parts, they have a substantial inventory.

And if your instructions are long lost, you may find them here too.

In case you didn't want your young daughter growing up to idolize a blonde, unhealthily proportioned woman who owns convertibles, Jeeps and veterinary clinics, she can now grow up to instead idolize skimpily dressed, alcohol-loving celebrities with multicolored hair, who also own everything.

As TMZ reports, long-time Barbie creator Mattel is planning to launch dolls for Nicki Minaj and Katy Perry. The dolls are said to include striking similarities to the real pop princesses like the tattoo on Nicki Minaj's left arm.

What little girl wouldn't love that?

Minaj has garnered a following of fans who refer to themselves as "Barbies" in honour of the singer's fondness for crazy blonde wigs and the colour pink. Both Minaj and Perry are known for breaking the mold when it comes to fashion. Usually they're both spotted wearing outfits Barbie wouldn't be caught dead in.

Nicki Minaj's Barbie, at least, is reportedly set to be auctioned off for the charity Project Angel Food, with bids starting at $1,000. Katy Perry's Barbie did not comment on whether she will be auctioned off for charity, too — she was hungover after waking up in Vegas.

We're looking forward to seeing the outfits these Barbie's will rock.

We're rooting for our favourite looks: A lime green sports bra just low enough for a nip-slip for Minaj and a cherry-topped cupcake bra for Perry.

'We've got a lot of chubby kids now'

► Bill Cosby remembers ballfields from his youth, wonders where the kids have gone

Bill Cosby played football at Temple, ran track for the Owls and still attends their basketball games.

But baseball? Not so much while growing up at the Richard Allen projects in Philadelphia.

"No, no, no. I wasn't any good," the comedian told The Associated Press recently. "But I was fast. I think I held the record for the highest batting average — maybe .300 or something — for someone who never hit the ball out of the infield."

There was the time he stole, too. A high school classmate's glove, that is.

"I got caught," he said. "I learned I wasn't a very good lookout for myself and better find something else to do."

Those stories aren't in his book that came out last month, I Didn't Ask to Be Born (But I'm Glad I Was).

There is a delightful tale, though, of the day his pal Peanut Armhouse got called home by his mom while playing softball and dared to ignore her. While the other boys stood petrified by her shouts, ol' Peanut picked up the ball, hit a weak grounder and did his own play-by-play while rounding the bases.

"As Byron Saam would," Cosby writes, referencing the famed Phillies announcer for four decades.

Back in the 1940s, schoolyards and sandlots in his neighbourhood were full of kids playing baseball and softball. Or step-ball, with players tossing a bouncy ball off the angled steps of Philly's row houses. Or even hose-ball, a game he recalled that used a cutup, four-inch piece of garden hose as the ball.

At 74, Cosby doesn't see crowded inner-city fields anymore.

"Look at how desperate we were to play. We'd be out there trying to catch a rock, in the dark," he said. "But schools cut out gym classes. Schools cut off recess. We've got a lot of chubby kids now."

Some of those kids, he observed, prefer to play baseball on a computer screen rather than with real bats and balls.

"What they're building are remedial gyms," Cosby

A Cosby story

► Bill Cosby's grandfather was a devout Phillies fan who kept two radios cranked up at home so he could listen to games from every room.

► When Cosby began to succeed in show business, he bought him a special present: season tickets on the third base side at Connie Mack Stadium.

said.

Cosby is concerned many would-be ballplayers are being priced out.

"Those gloves don't cost 12 cents," he said. "What do they cost now, $400? And it costs $600 or something to join some of these leagues."

"And remember, there are places now where you can't just go running around, the bullets are flying," he said.

Quite a difference from when he'd show up to play in the Police Athletic League. There, at the 69th PAL, bats and gloves and uniforms were provided. Everything except the shoes.

"Mine were cardboard and leather," Cosby said.

No matter, he was a pretty slick-fielding second baseman in those days. That's his story, anyway.

"I could turn the double play. I'd come across, put my foot against the back left corner of the bag and sidearm that throw," Cosby said. "That I could do."

Lohan's shoot leaks

► Lindsay Lohan to appear on Ellen to officially unveil her Playboy cover

The cover of Lindsay Lohan's issue of Playboy has leaked a week ahead of its unveiling, according to Hollyscoop.

The vintage-themed cover features a naked Lohan straddling a red chair in the shape of the Playboy bunny logo that strategically blocks certain parts of her body.

"The pictorial is absolutely fantastic and very tasteful, and will be accompanied by an interview that will let readers see another side of Lindsay," her rep has said of the magazine's content.

Lohan is still set to appear on Ellen DeGeneres' show next week to officially unveil the issue and give her first interview since violating her parole.

She is rumoured to have received $1 million for the shoot. ● METRO

Rumor has it that NBC Universal is courting Ryan Seacrest to replace Matt Lauer on the Today show next year.

Although Lauer hasn't announced his retirement, he has hinted at it quite seriously, and NBC wants someone big to replace him. And it's starting to look like that someone is our generation's version of Dick Clark.

The Wall Street Journal

announced the news of the courting on Thursday but so far NBC is keeping mum on something as heavy as, say, terrorist attacks?

He's too tan. Too involved in the Kardashians. Too smiley.

But maybe that's me just being a Hollywood-ist. And maybe what the show needs is Seacrest interviewing a head of state and then ending it with his trademark, "Seacrest, out!"

I saw Prince in concert last week and while I'm not sure if it was his out-of-control funkfest (hello, the guy is 53!) or having drinks after the show with a female friend who looks even better than she did in college, I can testify that some things do get better with age.

Wines can be a lot like that, but not always. Most mid-priced vino is drunk within 48 hours of leaving the shelf so many wine-makers design their juice to accommodate immediate drinking.

That doesn't mean your local liquor store won't have bottles you can squirrel away. Reds are best bets. Those from France's Burgundy and Bordeaux regions, bigger-bones Spaniards, Italians from Tuscany, and California cult wines make good candidates for the cellar.

Italy's 2007 Ruffino Riserva Ducale Chianti Classico ($22.95 - $34.99) comes from a spectacular year and though it will taste great with pasta today, with its dense core of dark cherry fruit, anise and light herbal spice it will age nicely over the next ten years. PRICES REFLECT THE RANGE ACROSS CANADA. It also allows you to cook with no added oil in the pan.

The salt is an essentially a hot bed in which to cook the salmon, and help the fish skin cook directly onto the salt for easy removal.

Skillet Salt Roasted Fish with Coriander Drizzle Preparation:

- 1 In a skillet, spread kosher salt in a single layer and place it over medium-high heat for about 10 minutes or until the salt is hot to the touch.
- 2 Place the salmon fillets on top and brush tops with some of the oil. Sprinkle with pepper.

► This recipe serves two.

Cover the skillet and cook for about 15 minutes or until firm to the touch. Remove the fish from heat and keep it covered for 3 minutes.

Remove the fish from the salt with spatula, leaving skin on salt.

- 3 Remove the fish from the salt with spatula, leaving skin on salt.

- 4 In a blender, purée cilantro, garlic and remaining oil until it is smooth and add vinegar. Pour the mix over the salmon and sprinkle it with smoked salt to serve.

► Streaky Edmonton Oilers look to play with more consistency after home stand slump

JOHN ULAN/THE CANADIAN PRESS

The Edmonton Oilers weren't as good as they looked in their first 14 games of this season and they aren't as bad as they've often appeared over their last 14. The trick for coach Tom Renney is to find the happy middle ground between the extremes.

After getting out to a 9-3-2 start, the Oilers have staggered to a 4-9-1 record since, with the latest misstep coming in a 5-3 loss to the Carolina Hurricanes on Wednesday — a defeat Renney deemed the most disappointing of the season.

Consistent, the Oilers are not.

"As much as our goaltending was good, our defensive game was very good to start the season," Renney said. "Our goaltenders had to worry about less chances against, less bona fide chances. That made a real difference."

"We do have a reference point with how we played. We have clips that would suggest we know what we're doing and the results sort of speak to that. Certainly lately, they don't."

Put the distinctly different 14-game segments together and the Oilers today sit in 10th place in the Western Conference with a 13-12-3 record as they prepare to close out a six-game homestand against the Colorado Avalanche on Friday.

Losers of two straight

► Columbus' Derek Dorsett jumps over Edmonton goalie Devan Dubnyk to score a goal last week.

games and five of their last six, the Oilers are just two points ahead of the 27 points they had after the same number of games in 2010-11, when they finished 30th overall for the second straight year.

"I don't think you're really ever as good as you look and you're never really as bad as you think you are," Ryan Whitney said. "As a team, I think it's about realizing that the same group of guys that did that earlier is here now."

"Sometimes you get too confident. You think the league is going to be easy. I know when I was young, you have some success and you kind of lay back and you think it's going to be roses the rest of the way. It's not. It's a hard league. There's no easy games."

Beaten 5-3 by the Calgary Flames on Saturday, the well-rested Oilers talked about starting fast and making amends against the Hurricanes, who came into Rexall Place languishing in last place in the Eastern Conference and on a seven-game losing streak.

The Oilers were instead listless, flat and unable to match the energy level of the Hurricanes, who had lost 7-6 the night before in Calgary. Special teams struggled again. Renney's top two lines accomplished little.

"We're looking for some consistency together," captain Shawn Horcoff said. "We've had good games here and there. We need longer periods, where you throw three or four (games) together."

"We're going through a bit of a tough time and this is where you need to turn it around and start finding ways to win some games. I don't think we're as bad as we've looked this last stretch, but I think we can be as good a team as we were early, but it takes a 20-man commitment to it."

Angels make Albert's wallet a whole lot fatter

Exactly six weeks after winning his second World Series in St. Louis, superstar first baseman agrees to historic $254-million, 10-year deal to play in southern California

Albert Pujols could have been a wealthy Cardinal for life, planning for the day his statue would be erected outside Busch Stadium next to those of Stan Musial, Bob Gibson and the other St. Louis greats.

Instead, after leading the Cardinals to a second title in a thrilling World Series, he chose to accept the second-highest deal in baseball history for a future with the Los Angeles Angels.

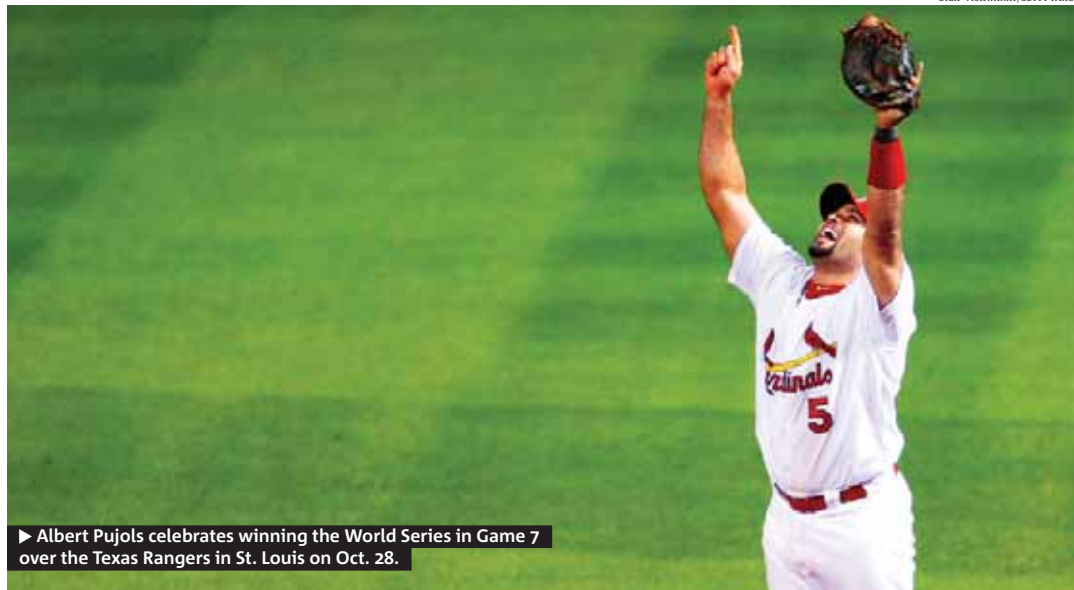

The three-time NL MVP agreed Thursday to a $254-million US, 10-year contract with the Angels, jilting the fan base of one of the sport's traditional teams for a club with only one championship in its half-century.

Many top stars have changed teams mid-career, but this is perhaps the best player in the game over the past decade exiting shortly after one of the great post-season power shows.

Pujols' honours include the 2001 NL Rookie of the Year award, MVPs in 2005, 2008 and 2009, a batting title in 2003 and two Gold Gloves.

Now, he's going West.

As his deal fell into place at the winter meetings in Dallas, the Angels struck another

"This is obviously the moment where we have thrown our hat in the ring," Angels manager Jerry Dipoto said.

centage of the Cardinals franchise. St. Louis also offered a 10-year deal that chairman Bill DeWitt Jr. said was in excess of $200 million.

"I would like our fans to know that we tried our best to make Albert a lifetime Cardinal," he said in a statement, adding later in a telephone interview: "They were substantially higher than our bid."

Pujols' contract is only the third to break the $200 million barrier, following Alex Rodriguez's $252 million, 10-year deal with Texas before the 2001 season and A-Rod's $275 million, 10-year agreement with the Yankees in 2008.

Yes Yu did: Darvish on way to MLB

Japanese pitcher Yu Darvish ended months of speculation Thursday by saying he intends to make a move to Major League Baseball.

The 25-year-old right-hander, considered the best pitcher in the Japanese professional leagues, wrote on his blog that he had decided to use the posting system, which allows MLB teams to bid for the negotiating rights to Japanese players who have yet to become free agents. Daisuke Matsuzaka and Ichiro Suzuki went to the major leagues under the system.

"I have decided to use the posting system," he said. "I wanted to tell my fans directly, so that is why I am posting this on my blog."

Darvish, the son of an Iranian father and a Japanese mother, went 18-6 with a 1.44 ERA this season for the Hokkaido Nippon Ham Fighters. His 276 strikeouts led the Pacific League.

'It's been a dream of mine'

► Magloire expected to sign a deal with his hometown Raptors on Friday afternoon

It was never going to take Jamaal Magloire long to ingratiate himself with Raptors fans. He is a local product, a well-spoken NBA veteran with a level of gravitas in the community few Toronto basketball players have ever had.

But he hit the right chord at the end of his first scrum as a soon-to-be-Raptor, nailing what his presence might mean so well that fans won't be able to do anything but appreciate him even more.

"I am the hockey player of this team," Magloire said at the Air Canada Centre after working out Thursday morning. "I'm the one that's gritty, that will work hard, and that will do whatever it takes to get wins at the end of the day."

► Jamaal Magloire speaks to reporters on Thursday.

Magloire is expected to finalize a contract with the Raptors on Friday afternoon, as soon as the final vestiges of the NBA lockout are blown away.

Terms of the deal aren't public — the Raptors can't even confirm they have interest because the league prohibits team officials from uttering the name of free agents until Friday afternoon — but Magloire will get at least one year guaranteed at the veteran's minimum of about $1.5 million for a player with his experience, with perhaps option years after that.

The 33-year-old centre will become the first Canadian player to ever sign with the Raptors.

"It's been a dream of mine for a very long time," he said of the opportunity to suit up with Toronto.

There are several layers to Magloire's role with a Raptors team that opens training camp with a Friday night practice.

He is the oldest player on the roster, a player with experience in the NBA Finals and all-star games, a history none of his teammates can match.

Over an 11-year career, Magloire has averaged 7.5 points and 6.6 rebounds per game. Last year he averaged 1.9 points and 3.4 rebounds with the Miami Heat.

Lakers have deal to land Paul: Sources

People familiar with negotiations say the framework of a three-team trade is in place to send Hornets all-star guard Chris Paul to the Los Angeles Lakers.

The Houston Rockets are the other team involved, and have agreed to send forward Louis Scola, shooting guard Kevin Martin and point guard Goran Dragic to New Orleans, the people told The Associated Press Thursday on condition of anonymity because the deal was not finalized.

The people say final details of the trade are still being worked out.

The four-time all-star Paul would have been able to opt out of his current contract with the Hornets after the upcoming season.

Today's horoscope

♈ Aries March 21-April 20 Travel will be a lot of fun today but if you overdo it, tomorrow's lunar eclipse will bring you back to earth!

♉ Taurus April 21-May 21 Inner changes are making you rather touchy at the moment but, as always, the moment will pass.

♊ Gemini May 22-June 21 You're in an assertive and adventurous mood, but some people may see you as too domineering.

♋ Cancer June 22-July 22 The approaching eclipse has got you in a bit of a tizzy. You may have to lie down for a bit to get your balance!

♌ Leo July 23-Aug. 23 You will be enthusiastic about something you discover today but don't get carried away and preach to people.

♍ Virgo Aug. 24-Sept. 22 You may lose patience with someone you work with today, but they are not being obstructive for fun.

♎ Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23 You're in one of those moods when you'll do anything for anyone. If not careful, you'll be taken advantage of.

♏ Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 22 A financial opportunity will intrigue you, but is it the kind of thing you want to get involved in long-term?

♐ Sagittarius Nov. 23-Dec. 21 You may fall heavily for someone today, but don't get carried away because this is a passing fancy.

♑ Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 20 Certain duties may be tiresome but if you tackle them now, then your time will be your own.

♒ Aquarius Jan. 21-Feb. 18 The approaching eclipse will bring more tension into your life but you have what it takes to handle it.

♓ Pisces Feb. 19-March 20. Family squabbles of one kind or another are likely over the next two or three days. SALLY BROMPTON
